

Provisional Plant List – Donington Pool

Introduction

Surveys of the plants of the Donington Pool and Woodland Conservation Area, and the St. Cuthbert's Meadow, were done in 2011. A good variety of species were found, reflecting the different habitats on the Reserve – woodland, waterside and grassland.

Some plants, particularly some of the trees and roses in St. Cuthbert's Meadow, are not native species but were deliberately planted about ten years ago when the Reserve was first set up. The same is true of plantings of garden varieties of Daffodils in places around the Meadow. The long-term plan is to encourage the development of native British species on the Nature Reserve and to steadily remove non-native species.

However, some plants have established themselves on the Reserve without human interference. These are called 'naturalised' species and there is one very rare plant in particular which has been recorded on the Reserve, the Lizard's Tail, (Saururus cernuus).
